The Highland Games

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

Those of us who live in Haliburton County cannot help but be thrilled by the upcoming Highland Games in Kinmount. And it's not just at the thought of haggis and bagpipes either.

No, the Games are a fun and entertaining event that raises our spirits and brings happiness – provided we don't experience gale force winds that lift kilts.

If I have an issue with the Games at all, it is that many of the events have no significance in this day and age. Take the caber toss.

I don't know anyone who owns a caber or tosses one with any regularity – although I suspect that if I tried to toss one, I'd probably become more regular than I'd like.

All I'm saying is that I'd like to see some new events to bring new excitement to this great event.

Among them are:

1. The bagpipe toss: In this event, you'd get those same brawny men who toss cabers to toss bagpipes. And lest you worry that this would detract from the bagpipe music part of the event, let me say that as soon as those bagpipes hit the ground, you'd hear them make music that isn't all that different.
2. Highland Dancing with the Stars: This event would enlist big name celebrities to do some of that incredible highland dancing. I'd give anything to see them attempt smiles as they tried to keep up.
3. Highland Dancing with the Cars: Failing the former, why not combine highland dancing with a demolition derby? Now that would be a test of fancy footwork.
4. Sheep skates: Here's where I think we could get a bit creative and combine the Scottish and Canadian culture. Canadians, essentially love anything that involves skates and the Scots, from what I am led to believe, love sheep herding. So how about a competition where competitors herd sheep on an ice rink while everyone including the sheep is wearing skates? Do this right and we might have a new national sport. God knows there will be enough pucks on the ice by the time it's done.
5. A Highland Parade over a working subway grate: This activity isn't for the faint of heart, but it would be interesting to watch.
6. Scottish language clinic: I must admit, my favourite accent in the world is the Scottish one. In fact, if I had my way, I'd declare it our official national accent. Which is why I'd love to see a clinic where someone taught the difference between accch and ooooooooch.
7. A draw for the haggis: In this draw, ticket holders could win an exemption from having to try the haggis. They'd make millions.
8. Feed a Scot: The Scots have reputation for toughness in battle. I believe this is in some part because they figure, all things told, it is better than heading home for dinner. When a culture's cuisine is known for haggis and porridge, you know meal time cannot be fun.
   That's why I'd like to propose having a booth where Scottish people are fed foods from other cultures. It would be nice to see the smiles on their faces as they discovered flavour.
9. Name the Scotsman: In this competition, we'd have a line of several people, including one person of Scottish descent. People visiting the event would then get a chance to look at them and guess which one is Scottish. (Hint: look for the kilt.)
10. Bagpipe music: I know I made a joke about bagpipes. Everyone does. But the truth is I love that music so I'd like to hear it throughout the entire event. Plus it drives away the mosquitoes.

Blues Brothers tribute returns to Haliburton

Saturday, July 18, at 8p.m., Canadian brothers Chris and Geoff Dahl and their hot back-up band bring the music and comedy of the 1980 Blues Brothers movie back to the Legion hall in Haliburton.

This is the third summer in a row that the well-known singing, dancing pair from London, Ont. will entertain area music fans with their hilarious tribute to those lovable Chicago delinquents, Jake and Elwood Blues.

Audiences everywhere find it hard to take their eyes off these "men in black" as they dance and jump around, belting out the best rockin' blues you've ever heard, on their "mission from God." Fans clap, sing and laugh till they cry, at this action-packed show.

Chris and Geoff have spent the last 10 years travelling throughout Canada, the U.S., Europe and the Middle East, spreading "the gospel according to Jake and Elwood," sometimes to audiences that barely speak English. But from Detroit to Dubai, Brampton to Berlin, everyone knows The Blues Brothers and everyone loves those great Canadian "soul men."

Tickets to Soul Men are $25, including all taxes and fees, at Cranberry Cottage, 163 Highland St, in Haliburton 705-457-1844, On The Spot Variety, 118 Bobcaygeon Rd, in Minden 705-286-6868 and at the Haliburton Legion 705-457-2571.

"Soul Men" is produced by Merv Buchanan of Trend Records Entertainment.

Police advise public to keep cars locked

Members from the Haliburton Highlands detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police have an important reminder for all: Lock it or lose it.

Over the past couple of months police have responded to numerous reports that unlocked vehicles had been entered overnight and small personal items and cash were taken by suspect(s).

The OPP would like to remind everyone that when they have parked their vehicles, whether in a parking lot or home driveway, the doors should be locked and valuables should be kept out of sight or removed from the vehicle.

Remember, if you see something, say something. If you see suspicious activity or behaviour around your vehicle or neighbourhood, report it to police as soon as possible so that an officer can investigate.

Anyone having information on these crimes or any others is asked to contact the Haliburton Highlands OPP at 1-888-310-1122. Anonymous information can also be reported to Crime Stoppers by calling 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS) or online at www.khcs.ca where you may be eligible to receive a cash reward of up to $2,000.

Beware of ticks

Local residents are being encouraged to watch out for blacklegged ticks that can spread Lyme disease. With blacklegged ticks (also known as deer ticks) being found in more parts of Ontario, the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit advises people to take precautions. While the risk of an infected tick spreading Lyme disease to a person is relatively low, the threat is still there and it is best not to take any chances, says Richard Ovcharovich, manager of environmental health with the HKPR District Health Unit. "Lyme disease can be very devastating to a person, so you should be watchful for blacklegged ticks when camping, fishing, hiking and being active outdoors," he says.

"The best advice is to get tick smart. Know the bug, know the bite and know what to do."

Ticks that spread Lyme disease act like hitchhikers. The ticks are tiny and cannot fly, but will settle on tall grasses and bushes until they can attach themselves to a passing person or animal. These ticks will feed on their host's blood, and in some cases, may transmit Lyme disease to an individual. "Ticks are more likely to transmit infection to a person after being attached for more than 24 hours of feeding," Ovcharovich notes. "That makes the prompt detection and quick removal of ticks one of the key methods to prevent Lyme disease." To prevent ticks from biting, the health unit advises local residents to:

- Wear light-coloured clothing, which makes ticks easier to spot and remove before they feed.
- Wear closed footwear and socks and, when possible, wear long pants and a long-sleeved shirt. Tuck your pants into your socks, especially if you are walking in long grass.
- Use a tick repellent that contains DEET (follow the manufacturer's directions for use).
- Protect your pet. Dogs, cats and other pets can carry ticks that spread Lyme disease. Pet owners should put tick and flea collars on pets and from time-to-time check dogs and cats for the presence of ticks. Contact your veterinarian if you have any concerns about your pet being exposed to ticks.
- If in a location where blacklegged ticks are known to be present, check your body for ticks at least once a day. Pay special attention to the groin, scalp and armpits. A mirror can be useful to check the back of your body, or ask someone else to check it for you.
- If you find a tick on your body, remove it quickly and properly to prevent infection. This is best done by using finely-tipped tweezers. Grasp the tick as close to your skin as possible. Pull it straight out, gently but firm. Then thoroughly clean the bite site with rubbing alcohol and/or soap and water. If possible, place the live tick that was attached to the person into a screw-top bottle and take it to your health care provider or health unit office. Testing can be done for surveillance purposes to determine if the ticks in this area are the type that can carry Lyme disease. Symptoms of Lyme disease include fever, headache, tiredness and muscle and joint pains. A good indicator of Lyme disease is a skin rash in the shape of a bull's eye. Symptoms can occur as soon as three days or as long as a month after a tick bite. If you experience Lyme disease symptoms, seek medical attention. For more information on Lyme disease, call the health unit at 1-866-888-4577 or visit www.hkpr.on.ca.

Highland Yard takes new strides this year

By Elizabeth Bate

Runners in Minden will be covering some new ground in this year's Highland Yard.

Race director Jack Russel has dubbed the two, five, and 10 km charity run the "new Highland Yard." Now in it's 44th year, the race was started in 1972 as a friendly race from the Rockcliffe Tavern to Camp Onondaga, but this year the race has a new loop route beginning and ending at the River Cone in Minden. The new route comes after concerns about vehicles being blocked crossing the bridge.

"It was just a mess with the bridge and the emergency vehicles and the number of people trying to get to churches," Russel said.

Participants will be sporting a new Highland Yard logo on their swag this year, as well. The new logo reflects the race's sole charity and organizer, Places for People, now that the Rotary Club is no longer helping to support the race.

"When we took it on, we were doing it with Rotary," said Russel. "Now because we are Places for People housing, that's our goal to run for housing in the Highlands, we have a logo now that reflects that housing."

Participants will get the logo on a race kit tuque and winners of the five and 10 km will get a handmade mug, along with splitting a $400 purse.

The race has partnered with the Running Room to operate a pledge website this year where participants can solicit support for the cause through social media. Those who collect $100 or more in pledges will be given a gift certificate donated by JoAnne Sharpley's Source for Sports.

The money raised will help pay off building and maintenance costs for the current homes run by Place for People, which offers low-cost rental homes for low-income families in the area.

Both Places for People and the race are organized entirely by volunteers.

"We want to get as much of the proceeds we make to go towards housing," said Russel. "People need support. People need good affordable housing."

Places for People offers three houses in Haliburton, Minden and Carnarvon. After building and renting the homes the group also has a tenant committee that offers assistance to tenants in the way of emotional, financial and family support, including help establishing a trust fund that tenants contribute to each month and use as savings for things like emergencies, education, or a down payment on a home.

"We don't just bring people into a home and leave them," said Russel. "We are there to help them and support them."

Also new this year is a family rate of $20 for the two kilometre walk/ run, with no limit on the size of the family. In comparison, the individual rate for that section of the event is $10. Those rates will remain the same on race day for families who want to sign-up at the door, while the longer routes have an early-bird rate which expires on July 30.

"We're trying a lot of new stuff this year," Russel said. "It's brand new and we're hoping people kick it up."

Registrants can sign up online by going to highlandyard.ca.

Water management expert to speak in Stanhope

By Chad Ingram

One of the country's foremost water management experts will speak at the Stanhope Firefighters' Community Hall this week.

Ralph Pentland is the keynote speaker at Environment Haliburton's annual fundraising event that will take place at the hall beginning at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 10.

The former director of water planning and management for the Canadian Department of the Environment, Pentland was the primary author of the federal water policy tabled in parliament in 1987.

He worked for government for 30 years and has spent additional years consulting and doing work with non-governmental organizations and universities.

Pentland co-authored the book Down the Drain: How We Are Failing to Protect Our Water Resources, in 2013.

"I sort of conclude that somewhere along the line, Canada sort of got off the rails," Pentland told the paper, explaining the country has fallen behind its peers, including the U.S., when it comes to issues of water protection and management. "I think it's a trend that's larger than the current government."

While Pentland said the Harper government's lack of transparency when it comes science, including the muzzling of scientists, has played a role in the state of Canadian water management, there are other factors, too.

"We usually let the provinces do things," Pentland said. "This is the way our federation works."

Pentland said Canada does have the same sort of national controls as other countries, no national drinking water standards, for example.

In the United States, there are public trust laws, stating that the government has a duty to inform citizens of the state of the environment and citizens can take the government to court if they feel it's failing to do so.

No such laws exist in Canada, nor does the country have the right to a clean environment in its constitution, the way that most of its peers on the world stage do.

The David Suzuki Foundation's Blue Dot campaign, which is being pushed locally by Environment Haliburton, is a movement whose goal is to add this right to the Canadian charter.

Pentland's talk will be a critique of water protection and management at the federal, provincial and local levels.

While some 90 per cent of Ontario is covered by conservation authorities, Haliburton County is in the minority and does not enjoy the oversight of a conservation authority.

"The conservation authorities actually implement a lot of the provincial laws," Pentland said, explaining they deal with issues such as as flood reduction planning, wetland protection and land use controls.

While globally Pentland believes a 25-year focus on free-market economics has created considerable environmental degradation, he believes it's not too late for human beings to get off this dire path.

"At some point, we've got to re-elevate the laws of nature above the laws of economics," he said.

Inappropriate tweets

Greg Cholkan
The Law Talkin' Guy

It was a snowy January day in Doncaster, South Yourshire. Because of bad weather and poor visibility, the local airport had to be closed. Paul Chambers wasn't particularly happy about it. In a moment of frustration, he took to Twitter: "Crap! Robin Hood airport is closed. You've got a week and a bit to get your [expletive] together, otherwise I'm blowing the airport sky high!!" It was an act he would quickly come to regret.

Chambers was charged with sending a "menacing electronic communication" in May, 2010. A lengthy legal battle ensued. He was fined £385 and ordered to pay £600 costs after being convicted at Doncaster Magistrates' Court. His first appeal was dismissed in November, 2010. The conviction wasn't overturned until June, 2012 when a judge ruled that most people who read the tweet would simply "brush it aside as a silly joke, or a joke in bad taste, or empty bombastic or ridiculous banter."

Whether funny or not, police take these tweets very seriously. In 2014, a 14-year-old girl was arrested in the Netherlands after sending the following message to American Airlines: "hello my name's Ibrahim and I'm from Afghanistan. I'm part of Al Qaida and on June 1st I'm gonna do something really big bye." Probably not the brightest thing to post publicly in this (or any other!) day and age.

In another case that year, police in Sunderland arrested a man after he posted an "offensive" tweet which made light of a garbage truck crash in Glasgow that killed six people. Like Paul Chambers, he was arrested on suspicion of making a "malicious" communication.

These incidents happen in our own backyard, too. In October 2014, CSIS started monitoring a Canadian man after he began tweeting his support for ISIS. The man was arrested on June 4 and spent eight days in custody.

While freedom of expression is a right protected by the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, we should remember that these freedoms are subject to "such reasonable limits prescribed by law as can be demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society." So what do you think? Are these tweets acceptable forms of expression? Or do they go too far and constitute criminal behaviour?

Dealing with stress

Alanna Jean
Natural Living

Summertime is known to be a relaxing time of year for many, but sometimes you can't help but let a little stress creep up into your life.

Stress can have many negative effects on the body including compromised immunity, disrupted digestion and overall weakness.

We all have two little tiny glands called adrenals (located on top of our kidneys) that are responsible for regulating stress hormones, and other hormones responsible for water and sugar balance.

Over periods of high levels of stress, these glands can shrink, which disrupts the whole system.

In order to support these vital glands you have to be able to manage your stress levels. Easier said than done, right?

Well, there are three key nutrients that can help lower your stress and keep you feeling cool as a cucumber.

Vitamin C is one of the most powerful and important antioxidants in our body, and is quickly depleted in times of stress. Make sure you are consuming dark leafy greens, broccoli, berries and red peppers in your diet.

There are eight types of B vitamins that are crucial to stress management. They also support your central nervous system and immune system. These vitamins can be found in animal sources (make sure they're organic!) and avocados, leafy greens and whole grains.

The third nutrient to consciously consume is magnesium. Magnesium? What is this, Grade 11 chemistry class? Magnesium is an essential mineral that has a magnificent way of calming us down in times of stress. It can aid insomnia, muscle spasms, constipation, heart palpitations and anxiousness with its natural way of releasing tension in the body. You can find magnesium in dark leafy greens, pumpkin seeds, broccoli and raw cacao. Yes, that means chocolate! Just make sure you're getting the best raw, good quality chocolate out there. I recommend to my clients the brand Giddy Yoyo.

Make sure to keep an eye out for next week's article where I talk more about natural chocolate and other "superfoods".

Land Between announces awards

By Jenn Watt

Haliburton County's roads department keeps an eye out for the area's turtles, taking special care not to disturb nests and ensuring the turtle crossing signs are put out each spring and brought in during the winter.

Their care for the area's reptiles led The Land Between to choose them as a recipient of the Turtle Guardian 2015 award.

"For crossing signs they've gone so far and beyond the call of duty," said Leora Berman of The Land Between, a conservation organization dedicated to the ecotone where the Canadian Shield meets the St. Lawrence Lowlands.

The Land Between also awarded a Turtle Guardian certificate to Heather Inness of Eagle Lake. Inness raised money to put a turtle crossing sign on Eagle Lake Road and regularly calls in about turtle issues. For more information on the program, go to turtleguardians.com.

Leora Berman, chief managing officer of The Land Between, presented a Turtle Guardian certificate to Brian Mulholland, engineering assistant for the County of Haliburton, on June 24. JENN WATT Staff
